HIS LITTLE DEALS.

Bilson is a clerk in a real estate office. Meeting his friend Horton, head salesman in a large mercantile house, he said:

"Jack, I've a good thing. If you have a few dollars tucked away that are not earning their keep I want you to come in on it. You can't lose; neither can you make a fortune. Still, there'll be a nice profit and there's no risk.

"Well, Harry," returned Horton, 'since that little flyer I took in Smelter stock on the advice of Stimson 1 haven't had much heart or money either to go into any kind of venture. I lost two hundred with Stimson's kind assistance."

"But this is not a speculation; it's just a case of buying something for less than its intrinsic value because the owner has to sell and selling again to some one who wants to buy and who will pay all it is worth. There is at least 25 per cent, profit in the deal and we ought to turn over our money inside of a year.'

"That sounds all right. If there is nothing to be paid in advance for the details I'll listen to your scheme." "You needn't be sarcastic. You don't have to come in if you don't want to." "Oh, I didn't mean to be sarcastic; I was just feeling a little sore yet. Stimson wouldn't give me a chance to lose my money until I had handed him five for his exclusive tip."

"Well, I don't do business that way. The fact is, a wheat ranch in Oregon is on the market because the owner is financially embarrassed on account of facturing concern in which he is largely interested. He must have some cash as quick as he can get it, so he offers this ranch of 960 acres for $12,000. A payment of $4,000 down will let him out, for he can dispose of the mortgages we give for the deferred payments. I want to get 11 other fellows up $400. That will give us a title to ing a purchaser who will pay us something like its true value, say $16,000. Even if we can't get our price for the property we can make a good profit out of cultivating the land. My uncle lives near the ranch and he gives ma this information, which I know to be Bilson had gone but a few moments when Brown dropped in to see Horton. "Hello, Brown," said the latter. How are those Ohio oil wells of yours? Have you run the Standard Oil company out of business yet?"

"Jack." returned his visitor, solemnly, "I'm going to be a rich man before a great favorite with the old soldiers. six months. I got back from the oil fields yesterday. Our company has got two wells there that yield over 400 barrels a day. I was prepared from what I saw to report to the directors that night of Evergreen Lodge No. 38, the stock should be advanced from 40 to 60 cents a share when I left there, but to-day I got this telegram:

"'Shot a 500-barrel well an hour after you left. Immense flow of gas. "That settles it. I shall recommend that the stock be advanced to 75 without delay. I wish I had a thousand more to put into it before the price

"Say, Brown, let me in on that stock at 40, will you?" exclaimed Horton,

"Why, I think I can do it if we hurry. The board will not meet until to-morrow and I'll fix things for you this afternoon. Give me your check the price on you. How much do you

"Give me a thousand shares. Here, I'll write you a check for $400. Look after this for me to-day, old man. Don't forget."

Some weeks later Bilson met Horton again. "How about that Oregon ranch, Harry?" asked the latter. "Did your deal go through?" "Go through? I should say it did.

of us cleared up a profit of about 50 per cent. on our money in less than three months. I'm sorry you didn't come in with us. I'm looking into another matter now. If I take it on Rose, Elm Street, Hopkinsville, and shall I give you a chance to put in some money?"

"No; I'm tied up at present. I bought a lot of oil stock at 40 a few weeks ago and the bottom has dropped out of the stuff. Brown told me the stock was a good purchase. I thought I could trust his judgment."

"Brown? Yes; his judgment is all right. Why, Brown came in with me on the ranch deal the very day I spoke to you about it. I explained my scheme He said he had just found an easy mark who bought some worthless stock he owned and it was like finding the money to invest in the good thing I had to offer. Brown's got a long head."-Chicago Daily News.
